

BIRD SIGHTINGS

OCTOBER 1994

SUMMARY

by Richard A. Forster, Marjorie W. Rines, and Robert H. Stymeist

October's "bright blue weather" held true this year. The weather was crisp, sunny and dry, resulting in great fall foliage. The temperature averaged 55.5°, just a bit above normal. The high was 77° on the 9th, and the low was 39° on the 12th. Rain was scarce. With only 0.41 inches of rain, it was the driest October since 1946 and tied with 1897 for the 4th driest October in 124 years of official records. The month was also the driest of any month since October 1946.

LOONS THROUGH WOODPECKERS

The lack of a significant storm during the month may have been one reason for the small numbers of Red-throated Loons, although Common Loons were well reported. Numbers of migrant Pied-billed Grebes in fall continue to be encouraging. Six Red-necked Grebes were reported at the Wachusett Reservoir on the 10th, a surprisingly large number for an inland location. Cory's Shearwaters graced the south shore of Martha's Vineyard with an impressive 150+ at Edgartown. One Greater Shearwater put in a very unexpected appearance at Plum Island. Normal numbers of gannets were present beginning in midmonth. As usual the heron group started the month strong with numbers dropping off rapidly after the first week. The highlight among herons was a Glossy Ibis over Mt. Wachusett in midmonth. The 75 Great Blue Herons migrating at Gay Head on the 2nd were indicative of the heavy migration on that weekend.

Two of the now-expected Greater White-fronted Geese were found at places where they have occurred previously. A remarkable Snow Goose flight on the 1st included flocks on the offshore islands where they are extremely unusual. A flight over Petersham on the 11th represented one of the highest single day totals ever. Although duck numbers were routine, the report of a hybrid male American x Eurasian Wigeon represents the first such sighting in the state. Essentially the individual was patterned much as a Eurasian Wigeon, but had the characteristic green ear patch of American Wigeon. Although such hybrids are frequent along the west coast and northern Great Plains, they are rare in our area. Ring-necked Duck put in a very good appearance, especially at Lakeville, and Ruddy Duck was widely distributed in excellent numbers.

Raptors were widely reported in solid numbers. Perhaps most interesting was a scattering of late Broad-winged Hawks along the coast and particularly the southeast, where they are decidedly uncommon. These came soon after strong northwest winds. Only one Rough-legged Hawk was reported. Peregrines put in a fairly good showing on Cape Cod and Martha's Vineyard. The remains of a recently killed Yellow Rail was small consolation for birders specifically searching for rails. Six Soras were also recorded. One King and two Clapper rails, and four Common Moorhens were good tallies for these species compared to recent totals. An excellent movement of American Coot, probably the best in 25 years, was highlighted by 590 at South Monomoy.

Shorebird migration during October includes a few species whose peak migration is in October, others that are in the tail end of their expected migration, and still others straggling beyond the expected departure dates. The highlights of this October included a record high count for Marbled Godwits, which visited several locations, and four American Avocets that appeared in Revere, some of which lingered in the general area until the end of the month. Both American Golden Plover and Hudsonian Godwit appeared in less than expected numbers, while Pectoral and White-rumped sandpipers were slightly below average. Slightly tardy species included Piping Plover and Wilson's Phalarope. The high count of American Oystercatchers on North Monomoy must have included all breeding adults and their progeny. The lack of storms resulted in no concentrations of jaegers. Substantial numbers of Laughing Gulls lingered, and three Little Gulls in recognizably different plumages were located among the throng of Bonaparte's Gulls at Lynn Beach on the 2nd. An adult Iceland Gull was early inland at Brookfield, while all Lesser Black-backed Gulls reported were adults. A late Roseate Tern was found at Martha's Vineyard, and Forster's Terns, while fairly plentiful, were highly localized at favored localities in the southeast.

The event of the fall was the appearance of three well-documented Selasphorus hummingbirds. Two Selasphorus species, Rufous Hummingbird and Allen's Hummingbird, are virtually indistinguishable in the field in female and immature plumages. When definitive identification has been determined, almost all of the Selasphorus hummingbirds found east of the Mississippi River (with the exception of Louisiana) have been Rufous Hummingbirds. Less than five records for Allen's Hummingbird exist east of the Mississippi; one record was a bird on Nantucket in 1988 (Birds of Massachusetts. Veit and Petersen 1993). On the other hand, more than one hundred Rufous Hummingbirds have been reported east of the Mississippi, with nearly all eastern states having at least one record (one notable exception is Rhode Island). Thus, logic would indicate that this month's sighting of Selasphorus hummingbirds were likely of Rufous Hummingbirds. Coupled with the two prior reports in July and September, this could be considered nothing less than a banner year for Selasphorus hummingbirds. This cumulation doubles the number of Selasphorus hummingbirds ever reported in the state, and one questions the actual identity of a Rubythroat reported at Nantucket on the 21st, a very late date for that species. A blitz of woodpeckers early in the month produced a fine showing of Red-headed Woodpeckers, the best documented movement of Yellow-bellied Sapsuckers in many years, and a very impressive number of Northern Flickers at Nantucket.

FLYCATHERS THROUGH FINCHES

Eastern Phoebes were reported in very good numbers, and Western Kingbirds were found in five locations including two individuals at Cumberland Farms. Six Northern Rough-winged Swallows were carefully identified sitting in the same tree where they were seen a year ago in September. The distinctive call note as well as the lazy mothlike flight and two-toned underwings were noted. Other late migrants included Veery, Wood and Gray-cheeked thrushes, Warbling Vireo, and Blue-winged and Black-and-white warblers. Twenty-eight species of warblers were noted, four more than October 1993. Among the highlights were 9 Orange-crowned, 1 Prothonotary, 3 Connecticut, and 2 Mourning warblers, and 9 Yellow-breasted Chats. An "Audubon's" Warbler was detected among the "Myrtles" at Wellfleet Bay Wildlife Sanctuary on October 17.

Uncommon but regular fall visitors included 11 Blue Grosbeaks; 39 or more Dickcissels; 10 Clay-colored, 1 Lark, 7 Grasshopper, and 2 Le Conte's sparrows; and an incredible flight of White-crowned Sparrows. Two Yellow-headed Blackbirds were also noted from Eastham and Nantucket.
