

DO YOU KNOW?.....

Do you know the pleasant, blue-eyed lady at the Washington Crossing Park Bird Banding Station, Jeanne Fluck?

When the Station was opened by Dr. Paul H. Fluck four and a half years ago, Jeanne was there. She has been there ever since, quiet, competent, unobtrusive.

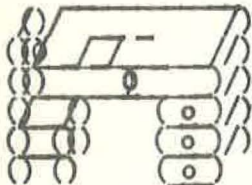

Before the public programs, Jeanne greets and talks to visitors, answering their many questions. During the program, she is the doctor's right hand "man", producing the right bird at the right moment, finding the bird's record card, standing by for any last-minute errand or instruction.

Behind the scenes, Jeanne busies herself with the hard work, toting food and water, struggling with heavy traps, going the rounds from morning 'til night in all kinds of weather.

When a sick or injured bird is brought into the station, as they so frequently are, and turned over to Jeanne (an R. N.) her gentle hands and unending patience nurse it back to health again.

At the desk, Jeanne handles the books and the stacks of record cards so vital to the usefulness of a station. If you don't know Jeanne Fluck, you should. Her efforts, energy and abilities are making her a bird-bander to be remembered.
