

strive to make us personally interested in fellow-banders. God forbid that EBBA NEWS should ever become a dry tool for specialists."

Stuart D. Henderson, Ballardville, Mass.: "I believe that this space might better be use to publish descriptions of trapping methods ... but since few banders seem willing to contribute to this type of endeavor I see no reason to discontinue..the "Who's Banding What" column. This column serves two purposes which I consider important. (1) A bander interested in a certain species need only look through the column to see which banders have large totals of this species and he can then corresponds with these persons. (2) This column encourages competition which if not blown out of proportion...can be a very beneficial force on banders. I believe most banders to be intelligent people who would be unlikely to succumb to competition merely for the sake of competition... I believe this column capable of encouraging healthy competition."

Frank A. Clinch, Watertown, N.Y.: "While there is some interest in this information, there must be many members who feel that there is little use in sending in their totals. What I would like to see published for one year, 1961, is the total number of birds of each species banded in 1960, by all the EBBA members, and no names mentioned. This might take more work to compile, it would, however, take only half the space to publish. It means very little to me as a bander that one person banded 78 House Wrens in one year - it gives no idea of how many were banded by the EBBA that year."

Robert L. Pyle of Washington, D.C., has suggested a much expanded plan for an annual banding summary, which will require more investigation into its possibilities and application: more of this in a subsequent issue of EBBA NEWS.

NEW MEMBERS AND NEW SUSTAINING MEMBERS

(This is a supplemental list to the last published in EBBA NEWS; Sustaining members are shown by an asterisk. A complete directory of EBBA members will be published, as is customary every two years, in the May-June 1961 issue. Any changes of address should reach our Treasurer, Mrs. Dickerson, prior to April 1, and on that date members whose dues are in arrears are removed from membership rolls, until they are reinstated. --Ed.)
