

202701 and 202702. I also took a picture of them on a stick held by the boy. A week later, June 10th, I returned and took a close-up of them.¹ This is a late date to find such young Barred Owls, but the pictures make it a positive record.—A. W. Higgins, Rock, Massachusetts.

A Common Tern Recovery.—Mr. John A. Gillespie, of Glendon, Pennsylvania, writes that one of his nesting Common Terns (Sterna hirundo) banded August 23, 1925, at Angelsea, New Jersey, was shot on May 10, 1926, on the island of Trinidad, near Caribe, Venezuela. The capture was reported by the American Consul on this island through the United States Department of State.

A REMINDER TO BANDERS

Please send to Mrs. A. B. Harrington, 136 State House, Boston, Mass., at the close of each month a record of all birds banded during the thirty days previous, and write to her for cards on which to make the records. Please also write to the editor frequently and tell him what you are doing bird-wise, not forgetting to send him notes and articles for the Bulletin.
